Chase Andrews gets ready to ride around his family's farm in a small tractor.

At The Goldfish Barn on July 6th...

St. Thomas Family Raises Money for Son's Special Treatments

By Joshua Defibaugh

In lots of ways, Chase Andrews is like any other 10-year-old. He loves to play sports, he loves sports cars, and he loves to ride a small tractor around his family's farm. But ever since he was born, his mother and father knew something

"All through his childhood, you could kind of tell that some things were a little different," said Amy Andrews, Chase's mother. "The size of his calves [for example], how long it took him to walk, how late it took him to grow, how long it took him to be able to do things such as pump himself on the swing. All of those things were just a little bit delayed. And as he got older, some things became even more delayed."

Last year, Andrews was diagnosed with Duchenne Muscular Dystrophy (DMD). Rare enough as it is – DMD affects just one in 3,500 to 6,000 boys in the United States according the National Institute of Neurological Disorders and Stroke (NINDS), an organization under the National Institute of Health -Andrews' case is even rarer.

"The misspelling in his gene was the only type of misspelling in the worldwide database that was that exact misspelling," Amy Andrews said. "And so, any medication that they are working on, they're trying to target the highest percentage of kids that would have (DMD) – so that pretty much put

Herbruck's Poultry Ranch Breaks Ground on Mercersburg Facility

By Ken Bustin

After a planning and permitting phase which has lasted three years to date, Herbruck's Poultry Ranch, athe Saranac, Michigan-based egg produced, finally ceremonially broke ground last Thursday on the $100 million complex it plans to build on the property of the former Hartung Farm, adjacent to Corner Road in Montgomery Township, and announced it is moving forward with construction of its sustainable cage-free egg-laying facility. A small crowd gathered by invitation for a groundbreaking and dedication ceremony, beginning at 11 a.m.

One of the sheds of the former farm provided shelter from the intermittent rain which fell throughout most of the program.

Inside, the venue provided several semicircles of white chairs arranged in front of a podium where officials, in turn, welcomed the company to the area and extolled the virtues of the project.

This is a milestone for our family," declared his brother Stephen Herbruck. He said the family and company were "committed to being a good neighbor and doing what is right for Mercersburg, the county and our birds."

"We would like to thank all of our local, county and state elected officials who have supported our expansion from the beginning," said Greg Herbruck, President of Herbruck's Poultry Ranch when it was his turn to speak. "Herbruck's is excited to break ground on our

First Lady Frances Wolf Kicks Off Commemoration of 100th Anniversary of Women's Suffrage

The year 2020 marks the 100th anniversary of the ratification of the 19th Amendment to the U. S. Constitution giving women the right to vote, The origins of the women's suffrage movement – as well as the abolition of slavery and other social justice causes – has strong roots in Pennsylvania and can in large part be traced to the Quakers and their belief that all people are equal and worthy of respect. When Quaker William Penn received ownership of Pennsylvania from King Charles II in 1681, it was the only colony where religious freedom was promised to all who settled here. Philadelphia became a model of tolerance, attracting a growing and influential Quaker population in the colonial period and beyond.

In commemoration of the upcoming centennial, First Lady Frances Wolf is encouraging women in Pennsylvania to wear white on Monday, June 24 to honor the suffragettes who did the same on this day 100 years ago to support the "Votes for Women" movement. Supporters can also wear the women's suffrage colors of purple and gold as part of the commemoration.

"One hundred years ago, our suffragettes wore white to show their support for granting women the right to vote," said

First Lady Wolf. "As Pennsylvanians, we can all be proud of our role in women's suffrage and we can participate in this celebration by showing our pride and donning the colors of women's suffrage to honor this day in history, and setting the stage for the national centennial of the 19th Amendment in 2020." On Monday, the state debuted the website pa.gov/ women-vote to serve as the destination for learning more about the state's women who were integral in the suffrage movement, serve as a gathering place for suffrage events, and tell the story of suffrage's Quaker roots.

Also on June 24, the Pennsylvania Department of State will display the original ratification document and host a public celebration from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the State Capitol Rotunda in Harrisburg with Acting Secretary of State Kathy Boockvar. The Capitol will be lit in the suffrage colors of purple and gold from June 21-24.

The state also has created a logo for organizations to use to mark all efforts to celebrate the centennial of women's suffrage. The logo features the Justice Bell, which toured the nation celebrating the achievement of suffrage for women in 1920. Pennsylvania is home to the Justice Bell, which reposes at the Washington

Memorial Chapel in Valley Forge National Park. The PA 100th Anniversary of Suffrage logo is available for download.

The Pennsylvania General Assembly voted to provide women the right to vote on June 24, 1919. It became law nationally on August 26, 1920 after 36 states had ratified the 19th Amendment. Three-quarters of the states are required to ratify amendments to the U.S. Constitution; 48 states existed at the time.

First Lady Wolf is also reminding Pennsylvanians to register to vote. She is encouraging eligible citizens to take advantage of the quick and convenient Online Voter Registration. The state's OVR application can be found at register. votesPA.com.

Solar Farm Being Planned in Montgomery Township

By Rachel B. K. Nichols

The Franklin County Fair may have to expand their definition of "farming" with the recent influx of solar farms in the county. The Montgomery Township engineer, Joe McDowell, introduced the initial plans for a 100-acre solar farm in Upton across from the landfill to be built by Lightsource BP on land leased from Waste Management. He noted that there are already two more sites under consideration or in the approval process in St. Thomas and, judging by the calls he is getting, there are more on the way.

The Supervisors scrutinized the plans carefully and had many questions for McDowell. They did not have to bring the plans to a vote as the Planning Commission's review had already resulted in there being a number of questions and issues raised to Lightsource BP. Those included questions of buffering, setbacks and storm water concerns that would have to be addressed before the plans would meet the Township's ordinance.

mercial activity. The plans for the Letzburg Road site show the site is being developed to sell the energy out of the area. Other than the 10-foot raised panels that rotate to follow the sun, there will be no other structures or personnel stationed on the property. Grass meadows are planted under and around the solar panels that help with storm water runoff and soil erosion. Eightfoot-wide access roads allow for maintenance activities.

"This one will set the precedent, so we need to be very thorough," said Supervisor Greg Weller as the three Supervisors poured over the plans.

A small portion of the site is located in Peters Township, which had not yet commented on the plans. Until the Planning Commission's comments are addressed, the Supervisors will take no further

Perhaps the longest discussion of the meeting pertained to the shortest piece of road in the Township, a less-than-100 foot strip that started off as a shortcut forged by the postal carrier in the

Hemp, Hops & Hardwood... Senate Panel Approves Specialty Crop Grant Program

The Senate Agriculture and Rural Affairs Committee approved a measure this week that would create a block grant program to support the development of specialty crops, according to the bill's sponsor, Senator Judy Ward (R-30).

Senate Bill 661 would create the Commonwealth Specialty Crop Block Grant Program to support products that are not already covered under a similar federal program. The grants would be targeted to high-priority specialty crops, such as hemp, hops and hardwoods.

The new program would be open to state and local organizations, producer associations, academia, community-based organizations, and other specialty crops stakeholders. Eligible projects would have to enhance the competitiveness of specialty crops by improving distribution, efficiency, research and other initiatives to boost consumption of goods targeted by the program.

"Agriculture is the top industry, both locally and statewide, and specialty crops are a growing part of that industry," Ward said. an important role in supporting a wide variety of crops, and I am hopeful that we can extend the same record of success to an even larger $number\, of\, specialty\, goods\, through$ this new program." Historical Society's Symposium Covers Life & Times of Hugh Mercer

Last Thursday, a group of about 30 people gathered in the Edwards Room of Kiel Hall on the Mercersburg Academy campus, for a six-hour symposium about General Hugh Mercer, the founder and namesake of Mercersburg. Presented by the Mercersburg Historical Society and organized by Rev. Ron Martin-Minnich, Joann McCullough, Sue Stoner and Betty Jane Lee, the gathering also included a luncheon, a question and answer period, a panel discussion, and informal time at the end when guests could interact with the presenters.

Three distinguished speakers, in turn, gave presentations dealing with multiple aspects of the life and experiences of the doctor turned general who, but for being killed in battle, might well have later been President.

The first presentation concerned itself with Mercer's involvement in the Jacobite Revolution in Scotland, and was given by Jeff Dacus, a retired U.S. Marine who is now a middle school teacher of U.S. History in Vancouver, Washington. Dacus holds three master's degrees, including one in American History from the University of Portland and one in military history from American Military University. He recounted how Mercer had joined the Jacobite forces, which were defeated by the British in the Battle of Culloden in 1746, and subsequently had to go into hiding and eventually escape to North America. Mercer arrived in Philadelphia in May of 1747, but didn't care much for Quaker Philadelphia and soon pushed on to the Conococheague Settlement, which had been settled by predominatly those of Scotch-Irish descent. He eventually settled between what is now Greencastle and Mercersburg.

Michael Cecere was the next presenter, concerning himself with Mercer's involvement with the American Revolution, where he served as General George Washington's right hand man, and is credited by many as having helped Washington to become a better and more savvy general. Cecere, who hails originally from Maine, later settled with his wife, Susan, in Virginia, where he subsequently spent 26 years in a classroom. Currently, he teaches U.S. History courses for Gloucester County High School and Rappahannock Community College. In addition, he is active as a tobacco grower on the colonial farm at the American Revolution Museum at Yorktown during the summer. Recognized as a Outstanding Teacher of the Year in 2005 by the Virginia Society of Sons of the American Revolution, he is also an avid Revolutionary War re-enactor, as well as the author of fourteen books and numerous articles on the American Revolution.

In addition to being a doctor and a military man, Mercer was also a very active Mason, and the third and final segment of the symposium concerned itself with Hugh Mercer the Mason, and chronicled his involvement with the Masonic Order. That section of the program was presented by Shelby Chandler, himself a past Master of the Masonic Lodge in Fredericksburg, VA. Chandler hails originally from Ft. MacArthur, California, but currently resides in Fredericksburg, where the James Monroe Memorial Foundation elected him their Fredericksburg Schol and Historian. He is also Assistant Superintendent of the James Monroe Birthplace Park

Adams wins by 39 points.
 If Clinton were to play Wilson, the team win by 25 (the 7 points they beat Jefferson by plus the 18 points Jefferson beat Wilson by nuals 25). But Adams beat Clinton by 14, so Adams would beat Wilson by 25 plus the 14 they beat Clinton by. 25 + 14 = 39 points.
